The Balkans Fighting.
The news from the battle fronts is most encouraging. An Italian correspondent has dispatched a graphic account of the manner in which the Serbians are defending their country against the invaders, and records the deeds of our French allies when the Bulgarian hordes rushed to the attack. The Serbians command the admiration of all men in their gallant stand against the enemy, and this at a time when they are only recovering from terrible struggles in their own capital. They have also had time to ponder over the attitude of those who had been counted as friends. It is dangerous at all times to judge in prophecy, but we feel sure the immediate future will see a radical change in the complexion of things in Serbia. The eyes of the world are centred on the little country sandwiched between other Balkan States, and though the Kaiser may claim that the Western front is the one front that really matters he knows as well as anyone that the fighting in the Balkans is of first importance to Germany.

The Guildhall Speeches.
The Lord Mayor's banquet is always made the occasion of an important pronouncement of the Government's policy, but the full and frank review of the European situation which the Prime Minister gave to the House of Commons a few days previously robbed this year's gathering of much of its interest. The speeches, however, re-affirmed the resolute determination of the nation to carry the war to a triumphant conclusion, no matter what the cost, and were infused with a spirit of calm confidence. Mr. Asquith predicted that the Entente Powers were sure to win the struggle, and he repeated the declaration which he made at the Guildhall last year, "We shall not sheathe the sword, which we have not lightly drawn, until Belgium recovers in full measure all—and more, than all—that she has sacrificed, until France is adequately secured against the menace of aggression, until the rights of the smaller nationalities of Europe are placed on an unassailable foundation, and until the military domination of Prussia is fully and finally destroyed."

China Mail.

The Guildhall Speeches.
As was anticipated, the Guildhall Banquet gave the opportunity to the Ministers called upon to speak to express their opinions regarding the situation and the prospects of the Allies in the great upheaval. It was, of course, the war and nothing but the war that was referred to: it is the all-engrossing subject. Without wishing to be thought in any way depressed regarding recent war news from the Dardanelles or the Balkans, we are of opinion that any or all of the Guildhall speakers might have been pardoned if they had struck a sombre note regarding certain aspects of the war. All has not been well with the Allies of late, any more than it has been well with the Germans and their supporters. The tremendous difficulties encountered in the Dardanelles, the faulty attitude of the Greeks in allowing themselves to be led, or rather misled, by Court intrigues, might well have furnished subjects upon which the sombre note might have been very properly struck. But what do we find? The note triumphant that has resounded all along and has prevailed strongly and confidently among the leaders of the Allies prevails as strongly and as confidently as ever.

GENERAL NEWS.

Horse Exchanged for Woodbine.
An officer writing home from the front recalls a remarkable incident of the retreat from Mons, says the Express. "One of our men," he says, "was telling me to-day that at the time of the retreat he was lucky enough to find a horse, which he mounted. In this way he was able to sleep a little while travelling along. But the best part of the story was the fact that he sold his horse next day to an Artilleryman for a packet of woodbines! How's that for a price?"

Death Rate at Singapore.
The rate of mortality in the Settlement of Singapore for the week ended October 23 20.87 per mille of the population. The number of deaths was 136, of which 87 were male subjects and 49 female. Communicable diseases claimed 18, phthisis 14 and malaria fever 15. The highest number of adult deaths, 29, took place between the ages of 25 and 35. The deaths under three months numbered 25 and between that age and one year 11. One European died, 3 Eurasians, 97 Chinese, 24 Malays and 9 Indians.

Indian and Colonial Police Services.
The first ten places in the recent concurrent competitive examination for appointments in the Indian and Colonial Police Service have been won by the undermentioned candidates: W. O. Plumb, marks 9,055; E. U. W. Pearce, 9,259; G. G. Field, 9,097; J. A. Scott, 9,033; P. J. Harrison, 9,016; W. A. Davies, 8,870; K. Lalonde, 8,808; O. P. Luck, 8,535; U. T. L. Darling, 8,496; J. A. Suggie, 8,453.—Singapore Free Press.

A Meal on Plaster and Pill.
It is extraordinary how dogs will manage to live on the most unlikely foods. Sefano-on has just told us how in the Arctic regions his dogs were partly fed on skin clothing, deriving therefrom sufficient nutriment to enable them to continue dragging the sleighs. Not a wit bound them in capacity of digestion was Mung de Navarre's dog, which, according to Mung de Navarre, lived on a box of liver pills, half a pound of plaster, and a pound of St. Louis.

Woman Justice of the Peace.
Justice has been done by the sight of the first woman Justice of the Peace taking her seat on the bench, which is also a novelty in the judicial history of the Empire. But the United States is before us. New Jersey has seen a lady invited by the Recorder to sit in the seat of judgment and, worse than that, or better than that, suggest a sentence for her drunken husband. She ventured to propose thirty days in goal, and her idea was accepted. Concerning the subsequent conjugal happiness of the pair, however, is silent.

Where the Mongolian Originates.
The mongolian race introduction into the West Indies has proved to be a greater pest than the vermin he was supposed to destroy, orientates in India, and is of the importance of him. There are good many parallel cases, of which the most notable are the rabbits in Australia and the sparrows in some parts of the United States. Nature seems generally to average her evil for arbitrary alteration of her zoological schemes, & F. P.

A Musical Vicar.
A most remarkable musical record has been established by the Rev. F. W. Gelpin, the vicar of Hatfield Regis, Essex, who has just been appointed vicar of Witham, in the same county. He has made a hobby of collecting old musical instruments, of which he has about six hundred, and he can play everyone of them. His instruments range from an Egyptian flute dating back to 2,000 B.C. to a sackbut made in Nuremberg for Henry VIII, and from a horn used in the worship of Boodhis to instruments such as those used in Nebuchadnezzar's band and mentioned in the Book of Daniel.

OUR LONDON LETTER.

(From Our Correspondent.)
London, October 1.

The light of a third fire shows it to have disappeared, and so we surmise it to be a listening post in a depression of the ground, or a trench run out from the German line. Little by little two of the scouts approach whilst the remaining pair stand fast in rear. The former carry a bomb apiece ready to fling into the German position should it prove to be such. It is a weird game, this eerie night work, having as its object man-hunting and the reciprocal chances of meeting a sudden and violent death. The final approach to within some twenty yards requires a supreme effort, but the long grass and the moonless night are favourable aid, and a vantage point is gained. There is no doubt now about the hidden danger being a hostile outpost, and so the deadly bombs are going to play their part. The end of the fuse is snipped, the pin pressed down, and both are hurled into the midst of the unsuspecting Hun. A terrific explosion follows, and their cries and groans tell one that the aim has been good. The scouts steal away to regain their own lines, for they have done well to-night.

Exchanging the News.
Occasionally the two companies of the British and German soldiers sing and shout across the open space, devoting their energies mainly to invitations to come on and attack, or to news of the German successes in Poland. The capture of Warsaw and Breslau, and the capture of the Baltic against the German Fleet afforded an opportunity not to be neglected of acquainting the enemy with the truth, something which he sadly lacks, so carefully is it concealed from the nation as a whole. Copies of London newspapers were therefore, fixed in a cleft stick and placed at night well out in the zone close up to the German parapet, the passages referring to the deeds accomplished at sea being carefully marked. Next morning showed that the news had been duly gathered in, and later in the day an opposition notice of German operations in the East was displayed as a set-off. In the area of Ypres and Hooge is the crater of a mine known to the Germans as the "Witches' Cauldron." It is the result of a mine exploded under the German parapet, leaving an excavation some forty feet deep and one hundred and fifty feet broad. By day the crater so formed can be adequately covered by rifles and machine-guns, and can, therefore, be lightly held, but at night conditions change, and it must perforce be occupied in sufficient strength to cope with an attack should one be launched by the British. One can imagine what a centre of attraction this crater is by night, what an inferno for those who form its garrison during the hours between sunset and dawn, exposed to high-explosive and shrapnel without number. It is not difficult to picture the crater wrapped in clouds of smoke and dust as the huge shells plunge into it, the air rent with bursts of fire, the defenders hugging the ground as it shakes beneath them under the incessant storm of shot and shell. The account of a German prisoner who had spent three nights in the "Witches' Cauldron" gives some idea of such a harrowing experience, and is well worth reproducing. Darkness, he tells us, has set in when they start on the perilous journey to reach the crater, the first time he has formed one of the garrison of this uncanny spot. They approach in a crouching attitude, half running and half crawling over the exposed terrain, the while the artillery fires as if possessed. The dug-outs and shelters away to and fro like a weather-cock as a burst of fire from the hostile guns strikes above, around, and in the crater. The smoke and thirst are overpowering, and each man is wondering when his turn will come next. Amidst such surroundings the night passes on, and with the dawn comes the evacuation of the cauldron, until sunset, when the reoccupation is carried out. None who have not gone through the actual experience can realise the full significance of what it most mean, and the nerves of iron it demands as the essential foundation to withstand such an ordeal.

Picking up the Language.
Lieutenant the Hon. F. S. McLaren, M.P., writing from the Dardanelles, says: "The Turks are wonderful shots, and have eyes like hawks. As soon as I put up my periscope bullets whizz round it, and at any moment one expects it to be shot from one's hand. I have done a good deal of work in the Indian trenches. It is thrilling to see them chanting prayers in the evening, and reading from old religious books which look as if they had come straight from the British Museum. They spend most of the day washing and cooking strange, flat things like pancakes. Their English is very limited, but they can say: 'Turk, b—fool'—a strangely incongruous expression from these dignified, turbaned Easterns. I have just been laughing with a machine-gun officer, and he tells me how wonderfully and calmly they attack at night, and of the sequel of the Turks as they were spiked in the trench. A few hundred yards away there are two hundred Turkish prisoners. I had a talk with one, who complained bitterly that he had been fed on nothing but olive soup. They have marvellous 'undies' spotted with dragons and crescents. Most of them are wounded, and our doctors were chopping off fingers and toes and bandaging them up, while our soldiers were sopping identical dices, water-bottles, and such like for cigarettes."

L.—Corporal Jack, V.C.
The details of the incident in which Lance-Corporal Albert Jack, the young Australian, obtained the Victoria Cross are as follows: "On May 19, as a party of 10 men and a sergeant of the 14th Australian Battalion were holding a short position on the left of the trench, the enemy's machine-guns opened fire. The sergeant and two Australians fell killed, and four were

The officer told Jack he would hold the exit and give the Turks the impression that he was going to charge again. Jack said he would make his way round to the other end of the fire trench at the rear of the Turks. The officer's party threw two bombs and fired several shots into the wall of the trench, opposite them. They then charged, but only four Turks came crawling over the parapet. These Turks were shot, and Jack was wounded in the trench with an unglazed head round the corner he was hit in the mouth. Well, in three places and fell back, blocking the trench. The exit, he said, he had shot five from the trench at this end, and had just finished bayoneting the remaining two, being well told, Jack jumped back from the fire trench and was taken prisoner.

HONGKONG, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 12, 1915.

CHINA'S NEW EDUCATION SCHEME.

We stated recently that the subject of education for the entire country of China has been engaging much of the attention of President Yuan, who considers that "the good management of administrative affairs and the stability of a nation largely depend upon the education of the people." A scheme, it seems, has now been drawn up which will extend over six years, beginning from the end of the present year. This scheme includes the establishment of no less than four hundred thousand schools and of five more universities. The plan sounds startling, but everyone understands that, in a country of China's vast population, every movement that is to have any penetrating effect must needs be on an immense scale.

Details as to how the authorities propose to set to work on the carrying out of this gigantic programme are at present wanting. So far as one can see, its success or failure will depend on whether the moderate and more or less old-fashioned ideas of Yuan Shih-k'ai himself or the radical, go-ahead theories of the more advanced Chinese are going to predominate. If the scheme is really the President's own, at least one "nought" will probably be knocked off the four hundred thousand and the old learning of China will still take its proper place in the curriculum. We pointed out some little while ago that there is a strong belief among many of the up-to-date Chinese that Britain's power is somehow dependent on the fact that compulsory education is in vogue at home. If these people are allowed their own way the four hundred thousand schools will become four million and we shall have every sampan child hustled into school, there to learn that which he could probably do much better without. Fortunately a sane controlling hand will be kept over in all this, and the extravagant side of the education plan will doubtless be allowed to slide.

If, at the end of eight years, China has one-tenth of the projected number of schools in operation, she will have done all that can reasonably be required of her in so comparatively short a time. She has apparently yet to learn that it is not education—and still less compulsory education—that has made the nations of the West great. Education is infinitely more advanced in Scandinavia, the Low Countries and Switzerland than in Britain or France; but there is no comparison between the greatness of these latter countries and that of the more educated. Education will provide China or any other country with a more or less magnificent fringe, yet will affect the actual fabric but little. Of course there is no harm in her trying; but we earnestly hope that the tendency to model things on the west will not be carried too far into the new school system. China has a learning of her own, and if the progressive party had its way that learning would be allowed to dwindle to vanishing point, giving place to flashy western methods more calculated to bring trouble than to encourage progress. It need not be said that the modern in engineering or in medicine is necessary to any country that is going to hold its head up nowadays; but, even in these directions, there is much that China knows and has known for centuries which is perhaps as good as anything that the West has to teach her. If she is going to rush and grab at European education, the acquisition of it is tolerably certain to bring her trouble; if, on the other hand, she is content to walk warily, to acquire gradually, and not to turn up her nose at the wisdom of her ancient fathers, prosperity and real learning will be her portion.

More Curio Hunting.

Last night at about 11.30, a Police Reserve man, not on duty, espied two dustbin examiners overhauling the bins which had been placed on the kerbstones in Queen's Road at the foot of Zeland Street. While he paused, looked severely on the offenders and reflected what he would have done if he had had his uniform on, the examiners fled—at no great a rate for him even to get within kicking distance of them. From their flight it is clear enough that these individuals were well aware that they were breaking the law—an additional reason why the magistrates should come down heavily on such people. Our Reserve friend noticed, too, that both men were quite decently clad, hatted and shod—which did not seem to argue that they were of the very poor class that might be glad to pick up even half a cent's worth of things saleable; and also that, when they fled, they left behind them a big basket in quite good condition. What this was filled with it was too dark to see; but these little facts, taken together, seem to show that it is not just the homeless and destitute who disturb the dustbins, but that, on the contrary, there are men engaged in the industry who find it a fairly profitable one.

The Rights of the Matter.

At first glance there would seem to be no particular harm in a man's taking from a rubbish tin a bit of wood, cloth, carpet or what not that nobody else wants; it would even seem childish to deny him the pleasure or privilege, or whatever you like to call it, of having a look-see, on the chance of his finding something useful or saleable. But experience has taught the Colony that the men who do this overhauling care nothing for the comfort or health of the public in general and would regard as quite a small and harmless matter the overturning and broadcast-spreading of a day's kitchen and household refuse. The Sanitary Board itself, by its uncleanly system of dust-collecting in broad daylight, can cause quite enough discomfort and disease in the Colony without any assistance from these amateurs. Of course if the Board's coolies were at all sharp they would organise themselves into a sort of watch committee, detachments of them going out nightly to club the dustbin marauders or else to hand them over to the nearest policeman; for the disturbers of the dustbins are their worst enemies, inasmuch as they take away just the things which the Sanitary Board coolies regard as their own perquisites. A word should be enough to the wise.

Amalgamation of Trade Unions.

It gives us no particular pleasure to read that an amalgamation has been brought about between the miners', transport workers' and railway men's unions. We would very much rather learn that each of all these societies had been forcibly broken up entirely. That, at present, is too much to hope; but it is regrettable that the Government should find it convenient to close its eyes while amalgamations are taking place. Such unions have been a veritable scourge to the public at home, for some years now; and a joining up of them is not by any means going to improve matters. In times of peace we all know, or should have known, how dangerous they could be to the public welfare; while, after war has broken out, we know, to the Empire's cost, what an abominable amount of power had been allowed to creep into their hands. Thousands of our soldiers who lie buried in France and Flanders were murdered by these unions—by the support which they gave to strikes which, as the strikers well knew, must be instrumental in keeping the troops short of munitions and the warships short of coal. Happily the British public has formed very definite conclusions on the matter, with the result that, after the war, steps must necessarily be taken towards keeping the professional malcontent and leader under some control.

VOLUNTEERS AND UNIFORM.

Now that all volunteers in Ceylon have received orders that in future they must always appear at "public functions" in the uniform of the Corps to which they belong, the question arises, "What is a public function?"

Nonofficial definition of a "public function" has been vouchsafed, but a prominent Colombo Volunteer Officer, in conversation with a Times of Ceylon representative, expressed the opinion that all public assemblies which are not by invitation and at which admission is to be obtained by payment must be regarded as public functions. Private dances, dinner parties, etc., are not public functions, but concerts in aid of charities are. Questioned as regards hotel dances the officer said he did not think they came under the category of public functions. Race meetings, public funerals etc., however, did.

Perhaps it would be as well if the officers of the different units were "made wise" so that they could properly instruct their men. If the interpretation given above is correct then the new order means a proper uniform for the Town Guard, because khaki shorts and shirt is scarcely adequate for a public function at night.—T. O. NOTES ON THE CRISIS.

THE ANCONA.

Bulgaria's Troubles Continue.

After much patient waiting on the part of the Serbians, the Allied re-inforcements are at last able to make themselves felt, at any rate in the southern area; and the seizure of Koprivka should be something more than the first step towards the forcing of the Bulgarians back on their own frontier and a big combined march northwards on Nish. It is not too early to say that, looking at their performances all round, Serbians and Bulgarians have both proved very much of a surprise. The Serbians have very pleasantly disappointed the neutral Governments not only by their persistence and endurance but also by the military form which they have evinced. At the beginning of the war, probably neither friend nor enemy took them very seriously; they had never had time to right themselves from the Balkan war, their army was small, and they had no money.

Surprises.
All that they have done since the war was carried into their country has tended to show that they knew how to profit to the utmost by last summer's respite, and that the assurance which they gave to the Entente, some two or three months ago, that they were fighting—let us say—nothing but idle boast. Conversely, the Bulgarians have failed to fulfill expectations. It has been a firm belief in British and Continental military circles that their army, pitted against any other of equal size would prove invincible. But has it done so? If we consider that the Serbian forces at its full has been at least a hundred thousand men less than the Bulgarian, and that it had been badly mauled by the Austro-Germans before the Bulgarian invaders entered the country, we must surely feel that these latter have very much failed to justify the world's expectations.

The Ancona.

It seems to us to matter very little whether the submarine that sank the Ancona was German or Austrian. In this world a man is known by his company. Austria, we know, has traditions of honour and chivalry such as Germany never had; but evil communications corrupt good manners; the German poisons whatever he touches, and no nation, whether Austrian, Turk or Bulgarian, can be hand and glove with him without becoming contaminated all too quickly. The master-mind throughout the war, so far as the other side is concerned, has been Germany, and all "warfare" has been carried on by her allies in conformity with her own peculiarly manly and honourable notions. As in the case of all the other liners sunk, the attack on the Ancona was just cold-blooded murder of non-combatants—the sort of thing that most nearly approaches Germany's highest ideals of a military or naval triumph.

The Usual Excuses.
We notice, by the way, that a Berlin semi-official telegram says that the Ancona attempted to escape—a most vicious proceeding on the skipper's part, to be sure, seeing that he was responsible for the safety of somewhere about five hundred human lives! But what is the connection between all this and the deliberate firing on the life-boats after they were launched? The United States will, we gather, "pursue the same course as she did in the case of the Lusitania,"—in other words will send a variety of Notes, all calculated to shield Germany, more or less. But is the American public itself going to stand to much of this sort of thing? Already, we notice from one of the later wires, "the tide of popular wrath is rising," as well it may, seeing that American subjects have again been murdered. In view of the two huge fires reported this morning, manifestly the work of Germans, it would seem to be high time that Washington really did exert itself to some little purpose. What has become of the talk of interning the German-Americans out there?

A YEAR AGO TO-DAY.

LEADING EVENTS IN THE GREAT WAR.

Extracts from the war news contained in the "Hongkong Telegraph" of November 12, 1914.

Honour of War to Emden Survivors.

The Capt-in of the Emden and Prince Franz Josef of Hohenzollern are both prisoners and are not wounded. The casualties number 200 killed and 30 wounded, who were taken off the stranded cruiser. All honours of war will be given the survivors. The Captain and officers will not be deprived of their swords.

Our Japanese Comrades.

Earl Kitchener, in his speech at the Guildhall banquet, added:—"To Japan, whose sailors and soldiers have victoriously displayed their gallantry and fine military qualities side by side with our men, I wish to testify the admiration, respect and gratitude of their comrades in the British Army."

Germans Said to have made Peace Proposals.

Germany, becoming alarmed at the Russian successes, has made preliminary offers of peace to Russia, who rejected them.

Loyal Moslems.

Mr. Harcourt, Secretary of State for the Colonies, expresses the Government's gratification on receipt of loyal messages from the Sultan and Moslems of Zanzibar, who from His Majesty's subjects in Cyprus and their denunciation of the action of Turkey.

Military Despotism in Turkey.

A White Paper issued to night shows Great Britain's infinite patience in dealing with Turkey and makes it clear that Ever Pasha (leader of the Young Turk Party) and the Germans are responsible for the war, the best classes in Turkey being helpless in face of military despotism.

NO DENIAL.

Never go Cold or Hungry. "Rather than go hungry, steal" would appear to be a rule lived up to by a Chinese who found himself in the Police Court, this morning.

It appeared that the defendant stole bran, wood, and a bag from the mule stables at Causeway Bay, and when asked by the Magistrate what he had to say in answer to the charge, said he had no food in the house so he stole the bran; there was no fire in his house so he stole the wood.

For finding so speedy a way out of his domestic and economic difficulties, the candid one was sent to gaol for a month and ordered to be exposed in the stocks for four hours.

THE THEATRE ROYAL.

Last Evening a Success.

The popularity which Mr. Horace Godin's Company have enjoyed during their stay here has not fallen off in the slightest degree, and last night's performance was attended by as large an audience as the previous ones have been.

Each number received meritorious applause, and the keenest interest was taken in the mystifying performance of Mr. Godin, who created great amusement by his exceptionally clever feat of making an egg, which he places in a bag, totally disappear before the eyes of the audience. His various items evoke unstinted praise from all sides, and the third series of the "The Tiger God" ("A Moorish Mystery") was very much appreciated.

Mr. Gosward, the comedian, is responsible for the creation of roars of laughter, which is so spontaneous as to be refreshing, notwithstanding that some of his items are beginning to wear rather shabby, he is successful in infusing into them such an amount of originality as to make them very acceptable.

One of the most popular turns in the evening is that of the simultaneous stepping executed by Misses Hayes and Crawford, who last night had to return several times in answer to insistent encores. Bert Leywood and May Norrell, burlesque impressionists, and Miss Barbara Babington, balladist in popular numbers, also rank high.

DR. FRANCIS CLARK.

Retirement of Popular M. O. H.

His many friends in Hongkong will hear with extreme regret that Dr. Francis Clark, Medical Officer of Health, who went home on leave recently, is contemplating retirement from the Colonial Service. We understand that his resignation has been accepted as from February next, and that the cause of it is his failing eyesight. One of his eyes has been giving him trouble for some time past, and Dr. Clark is persuaded that his needs more open air life than his many duties in Hongkong would have been likely to leave him free for. At present he is acting as Tuberculosis Officer for the County of Northumberland, while the regular holder of that post is at the Front.

The doctor had been M.O.H. in Hongkong for twenty years and, during that time, had fulfilled at intervals many other Government duties in a highly satisfactory manner—among these being Superintendent of Statistics in the office of the R.G., Acting Secretary of the Sanitary Board, Acting Colonial Veterinary Surgeon, &c. He was also at one time a member of the Legislative Council and, for eighteen months, President of the Sanitary Board. In all local affairs he bore a very generous share, and his activities in connection with the University, St. John's Cathedral and the O.Y.O. are, of course, well known to everyone. He was, for seven years, Cathedral Treasurer, a post full of trouble and difficulties; while his work in connection with the University Hotel was most beneficial to all concerned. Dr. Clark had a splendid head for business and he leaves both the Hotel and the Corinthian Yacht Club in an excellent financial condition. At the University he was intensely popular, and, there, as elsewhere, his unflinching energy and real goodness of heart will be greatly missed.

We wish Dr. Clark the best of luck and health in his new life.

November 11, 1.50 a.m.
A Petrograd communique reports a lull in the fighting in the Courland and Dvinsk regions, but on the southern front there has been desperate fighting. North of Yelki the Russians repulsed a number of enemy attacks and they pierced the enemy front south-east of the village of Budki, which they occupied together with the adjacent forests. They captured over two thousand prisoners, half of whom were Germans, and twenty maxima. Great numbers of the enemy were drowned in the river Tcherniavka. Artillery largely contributed to the Russian victory.

THE ANNIVERSARY OF TSINGTAO.

The Record of a Year's Labour.

HOW JAPAN HAS MADE GOOD.

Those who have visited Tsingtao this summer—and their number has been out of all proportion to what, in the circumstances, might have been anticipated—must have been struck by the general condition of prosperity as well as by the law and order that prevail in something less than twelve months since a recent visitor writing in the N. C. Daily News. A year ago the Germans were making a desperate effort to obey their Emperor's order to retain at all costs a firm hold on their one little spot in the sun, and the Japanese battle ships supported by the British were bombarding their forts from the northeast, east and south, while land forces were slowly but surely invading their territory from the west and northwest.

Those visitors who had leisure and inclination to analyse the position will, we believe, be of opinion that, all things considered, Japan has "made good" in Tsingtao, in so far as she has in a short space of time reduced a chaotic condition to normal and, starting from that base, has set in motion the machinery of the industries and commerce of the place in a manner most likely to develop in the future.

There is no object in recapitulating all that occurred a year ago, but it will be well to consider for a moment the condition of affairs when Japan took possession of the leased territory. Closely watched by a horde of traders commendably anxious to lay hands upon the ropes of German commerce and to start in at once with business, the military authorities had to cope with difficulties of very considerable magnitude. The immense amount of legislative and civil administrative work that fell into the hands of the military men in office is difficult to realize, and those only who were in constant communication with them at this time know the strenuous weeks of labour by night as well as by day that followed the fall of Tsingtao.

Understandably, in order to reduce affairs to the normal without loss of time a German system of administration—with modifications to render it suitable to Japanese requirements—was adopted, and this measure alone necessitated the translation of every German law and by-law affecting the colony. Martial law, of course, obtained and still obtains, but even this was unequal to coping with the tremendous influx of undesirable who swarmed into Tsingtao as soon as the port was declared open. Looting, in consequence, was not unknown and the new Government was soon obliged to re-ship vast numbers of Japanese immigrants, who had quickly become destitute, back to their own country. Had this rush of people been kept out for, say, another month even, municipal arrangements would have neared completion and the proper policing of the place would, among other things have been organized.

Owing, however, to pressure being brought to bear upon the Japanese to declare Tsingtao an open port—pressure, admittedly, emanating from British sources—the Japanese, anxious to do all that was possible for their ally, yielded, being naturally constrained to allow similar privileges to their own countrymen. In this condition of unpreparedness the result of this well-intentioned action was chaotic. Prior to that time, considerable speculation had existed as to whether trading conditions would be granted equally to nationals other than Japanese and a certain amount of ill feeling was, most illogically, generated in China in January last owing to British steamers not being allowed to enter the port. After a moment's consideration of the following reasons for their being thus debarred it will be seen that inactivity no unfairness existed at all.

A DISPUTE.

Women Settle a Difference in their Own Way.

Two young women had a difference two days ago and the settlement appeared to have been adjourned until yesterday, when they met on Morrison Hill Road, and had a "stand up fight." Before they had come to a decision the police stepped in and stopped the fight, bringing the two disputants before Mr. Hazeland, at the Police Court, this morning. His Worship fined them each $3, and in the hope of preventing any combat in the immediate future, bound both over to be of good behaviour.

GERMAN SUBMARINE LOSSES.

New York, Oct. 3.—Long Washington dispatches are published here describing, on the basis of "authoritative information" in possession of the Administration, the manner in which the British naval authorities successfully overcame the German submarine menace. Between 60 and 70 German submarines are said to have been sunk or destroyed. It is indicated that this magnificent result will profoundly influence American naval estimates, which, owing to the impression created by the more sensational atrocities committed by the Germans, were to have provided an immense increase in the construction of submarines, to the neglect of Dreadnought construction. The faith of the American authorities in Dreadnoughts is now completely restored.—Times.

LORD KITCHENER ON THE NEED FOR MEN.

We take from the Manchester Guardian's report of a recreating meeting at Longlight on Oct. 3 the following:—

Councillor Tom Fox said he had worked might and main to maintain the voluntary system, but it rested with the young men of the country as to whether it was maintained or not. On Tuesday he and other Labour representatives had an interview of an hour and a half with Lord Kitchener. He told them many things he could not repeat, but he told them some things he could. "There is no room," Lord Kitchener said to them, "for any pessimism. Give me the men and the war munitions I want and I will guarantee my personal reputation that we have the war in the hollow of our hands." (Cheers.) "I know," he added, "how many men I want, and how many I want for munitions. I have their names and the numbers on their doors, and if they do not come I will fetch them." (Cheers.)

A STUBBORN FOE.

To conquer an obstinate enemy requires persistence and perseverance. It is the same with Rheumatism, the dread foe of mankind, which ranks foremost in stubbornness. To eradicate it from the system, you must use the right weapon. LITTLE'S ORIENTAL BALM is the only remedy that can conquer it. It has cured helpless, crippled sufferers who have been discharged from the hospital as incurable. Mr. W. Williams, Totterdown, Bristol writes:—"For 3 years I have been rendered unfit for work by Rheumatism. At night terrible shooting pains kept me in agony. I could not sleep or use my arms. Two bottles of that wonderful remedy LITTLE'S ORIENTAL BALM cured me completely. I can recommend it with utmost confidence."

The Pacific Mail Steamship Company.

The directors of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company, which recently sold five of its ships to the Atlantic Transport Company for $5,250,000, called a special meeting of stockholders in New York on September 22, to vote upon a proposition to reduce the capital stock from $20,000,000 to $1,000,000, so as to permit a distribution of assets among the stockholders. The plan provides for a reduction in the par value of the stock from $100 to $5, leaving each stockholder with the same proportionate ownership as before. An official statement said:—"The act of Congress approved March 4, 1915, generally known as the Seamen's Act, becomes effective November 4, 1915, as to vessels of the United States. The company cannot continue operations under the terms of that act without incurring heavy losses. Figures show that the act would increase the expenses of your trans-Pacific fleet as to the items of wages and feeding crews alone by $640,805 per annum, other provisions of the act relating to lifeboat crews and to your Central American line would swell this amount. The abnormally large surplus in 1915, due to higher rates following the withdrawal of Canadian Pacific and Japanese steamers, in consequence of the European war, would not suffice to meet the increase of wages and feeding expenses the act will demand. The directors are forbidden by law to pay dividends out of surplus profits or to divide any part of the company's capital among the stockholders. In order to permit the distribution of moneys as a dividend to stockholders a reduction of the company's capital stock is deemed advisable. The company still owns eight steamships. It was officially announced that these will be sold as soon as a satisfactory purchaser can be found."

THE SHANGHAI ASSASSINATION.

ASSASSINS HANDED OVER TO CHINESE JUSTICE.

(From Our Own Correspondent).

Shanghai, November 11, 10.10 p.m.

The two men who were responsible for the assassination of Admiral Tseng whilst he was proceeding to the Japanese Coronation Reception at Shanghai yesterday, were tried at the Mixed Court to-day before American and Japanese Assessors. The men admitted their guilt, and were handed over to the Chinese Authorities. A Japanese witness of the outrage was injured by a portion of the bomb.

THE ANNIVERSARY OF TSINGTAO.

State of the Harbour.

The entrance to the large harbour was completely blocked by three sunken steamers and the only available anchorage remaining was the small junk harbour with no godown accommodation on shore and literally no dumping ground for cargo for more than three boats at most. It was only right, and certainly it was only natural, that this very limited wharf space should be allotted to the Japanese and because of the following fact. There were some fifty thousand immigrants, mainly riff-raff from Japan, to feed, to say nothing of all of the troops which at that time probably numbered another twenty thousand in addition.

The naval authorities lost no time at all in removing these sunken obstacles to trade, and as soon as the ships had been raised British steamers were not only immediately allowed to come in but were also immediately accorded—and still enjoy—precisely the same privileges as the Japanese.

The administration of Tsingtao is to be congratulated upon the manner in which they have so quickly gathered up the reins of municipal control. The water-works, as may be remembered, were blown to pieces during the siege; the electric power station formed a target for Japanese shells from the south-west; the fine roads (once the pride of every fat Teuton who in his best clothes perambulated thereon for his Sunday outing) suffered fearful havoc from the transit of heavy guns in addition to the holes torn in them by the exploding German mines which lined their borders.

In short, it is not difficult to imagine that state of affairs which would necessarily exist in a settlement such as Tsingtao when, at the termination of a three months' siege, the administration is suddenly transferred from a Teutonic to an Asiatic power. Suffice it to say that such institutions necessary to the welfare of the people as the water supply, the electric power, the model slaughter house, the prison, the municipal hospital, and, not least, the railway are working quite smoothly, and are being systematically and satisfactorily administered by the military authorities.

Municipal Education.
Education is provided for in the fine municipal schools where at the time being over seven hundred Japanese children are being taught upon western principles. The schools for Chinese children—under Japanese supervision—are keeping their term as usual. There is no doubt in the mind of the writer of this article that this modern education of Japanese children on European lines in their midst is bound to have a very decided effect upon the Chinese of the place. It was as instructive as it was interesting to watch the hundreds of small Chinese school boys who were brought by their teachers to look on while the seven hundred Japanese children spent a gala day not long ago in most vigorously and keenly contested athletic sports upon strictly foreign lines. It speaks volumes, too, for Japanese breadth of mind that the German children remaining here are able to attend their own school and pursue their education unmolested. That trade, other than local, has not yet resumed its normal condition is only to be expected. The abnormal conditions existing in Europe prevent that. The principal export from Tsingtao, straw braid, has, in consequence of recent hostilities, been to a large extent diverted therefrom to Chefoo, and naturally it will take time before the trade returns. The export ranking second in importance is that of ground nuts (peanuts), also for the European market. The season for these begins in December, but in spite of good crops it can hardly be expected that this trade will right itself immediately.

Shortage both of tonnage and freight will send up the cost of ground nuts to at least 150 per cent. more than was the case prior to the war, and as this is a cheap article unable to bear so heavy an advance, it will not be surprising should this season prove a failure. But it will not in any sense be fair to blame the Japanese for misadministration. From the foregoing it should easily be seen that the transfer from German to Japanese rule is not likely permanently to interfere with the well-being of Tsingtao, and even if the Germans remaining there find the conditions of life irksome, they most assuredly have only themselves to thank. They cannot be said to have behaved well. They do not appear to have had even a rudimentary knowledge as to how "to play the game."

In the first instance it was the generous intention of the Japanese to accord those who remained in Tsingtao precisely the same privileges and consideration that were extended alike to Allies and neutrals. Ladies were treated with respect and as far as their safety was concerned might freely walk in the surrounding woods and paths. Services continued in the big Lutheran church and, as has been already mentioned, schools were reopened. Mission work pursued the even tenor of its way.

German Fides.
In the terms of surrender the Japanese very generously acquiesced to the German appeal that the Landsturm, chiefly the heads of firms in Tsingtao, should not, in consideration of the fact that they had not been "called to arms," be interned in Japan, but allowed to remain in Tsingtao with their wives and families. That this privilege was obtained under absolutely false pretences was disclosed shortly afterwards when an order came to light dated August 17, which enacted that every man of the Landsturm be called up to serve.

Quite recently eleven men and women, refugees prior to the siege, taking mean advantage of the Japanese, passed themselves off as French or Americans and returned to Tsingtao. The immediate result of this was an order issued on July 25 last requiring all persons landing in Tsingtao to be furnished with passports. Among those recently deported was the pastor of the Lutheran church who, apparently a man sadly lacking both in self control and discretion, poured forth torrents of abuse upon the British from what he was mistaken in believing to be, the stronghold of his pulpit.

Although virtually the guests of the Japanese, those Germans remaining—they number 351 women and children and forty-four men—are constantly breaking their parole, and sending secret letters, by Chinese, calculated to make mischief. False rumours which, be it noted, the Japanese are most industriously engaged in refuting, are being circulated throughout Shantung generally and in Tsingtao in particular.

These are to the effect that the Japanese are in reality in league with the Germans, and that the Japanese alliance with Great Britain is merely another "scrap of paper." The Chinese are also freely informed that the Germans are bound to conquer in Europe and in consequence of these and other tactics German financial credit with the Chinese is considerably better than it was before the war. The depreciation of the German nickel coin in Tsingtao after the Japanese occupation was the cause of great anxiety to the native, and one patriotic German firm accepted and gave full value for all nickel coins presented by the Chinese to the amount of several thousands of dollars.

Treatment of the British.
Of the friendly intentions of Japan to Great Britain as equally to Russia and other Allies there has never for one moment been room for doubt. England has all along been the favoured nation, and everything that could be done locally to conduce to the comfort of visitors during the summer just past.

The British Consul, who, be it understood has no locus standi as such in actuality during the reign of martial law, has frequently been consulted by the authorities as to whether he could suggest anything which would tend to the enjoyment of Tsingtao by those who sought health and entertainment among its surroundings.

That there should be no possibility of friction in connection, for instance, with bathing, the beach arrangements were placed unreservedly in Mr. Eckford's hands and the bathing huts, of which there is a fine and picturesque array, were grouped together under the various nationalities in the place. The only flag, in fact, other than Japanese, flying in Tsingtao was over the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank and the famous Tsingtao Brewery.

Great interest has naturally been taken in the forts and redoubts around Tsingtao, and permits to visit these have been freely granted, while in many instances an officer of the Imperial Japanese Army has personally escorted visitors, explaining the many points of importance in connection with their application to the war.

Japan has, as we have said, made good in Tsingtao, and, if evidence of her faithfulness to her Allies were needed, her friendly action in sending to Russia a cargo of German rifles interned in Tsingtao early in the war; her generous supply of flour to the same country; and the manner in which she sought to collect copper cash in Shantung with a view to assisting Great Britain by the supply of this metal, leaves little room for doubt as to her real sentiment.

Soldiers' Graves.
As was pointed out in last Saturday's issue, British visitors have subscribed a sum of money with the object of providing some permanent memorial to the twelve men of the South Wales Borderers who lost their lives during the siege, but at present no definite conclusions have been come to as to the locale for such.

TELEGRAMS.

JAPANESE CORONATION FESTIVITIES.

CARRIED OUT WITH GREAT POMP.

(Reuter's Service To "The Telegraph.")

London, Received, November 12.

Reuter's correspondent at Tokyo states that the ceremonies attendant on the Japanese coronation were carried out yesterday at Kyoto with great pomp, precisely according to established precedent, except that the Empress was absent owing to indisposition. The Emperor after worship before the sacred shrine containing the divine mirror, delivered a speech in which he spoke of unity and patriotism as being the highest tributes which could be paid to one's ancestors. After this an Imperial Rescript was issued granting a special amnesty and decreasing a grant of one hundred thousand pounds for charity. The Emperor received messages of congratulation from His Majesty King George, President Wilson, and other heads of States.

In the event of telegrams arriving too late for insertion on this page they will be found on the Extra.]

EARLIER TELEGRAMS.

THE ASSASSINATION OF ADMIRAL TSENG.

Received November 10.

A telegram from Shanghai states that Admiral Tseng Jun-chang, Military Governor of Shanghai, while motoring to the Japanese Consulate to attend the Coronation reception, was assassinated by two anti-monarchists, who fired eighteen shots at him from automatic pistols. The Admiral's secretary was seriously wounded.

PRIME MINISTER OF NEPAL HONOURED.

Received November 11.

The Prime Minister of Nepal has been gazetted Honorary Lieutenant-General.

Ten of the men fell and were buried at a spot some five miles outside the settlement but the other two were killed and lie quite fifteen miles away. There has been some idea that the ten bodies should not be moved but that the other two be brought into the place and placed there.

Against this, however, there is the objection that these graves are rather off the beaten track and that in the dim future they might be forgotten and even neglected. The pretty cemetery already in existence on a hillside immediately outside the town may be considered as being more suitable. The graves are arranged there in grassy terraces and there would seem more chance that the soldiers' memorial might be more certainly preserved in perpetuity.

The very graceful proposal on the part of the Japanese administration at Tsingtao that the British soldiers should be included in the memorial that they are proposing to erect to their own brave men in the vicinity of the Race Course is under consideration by the British Consul and has been greatly appreciated by the residents of the place.

LUKONG IN THE HARBOUR.

Serious Charge Against a Cargo Coolie.

At the Police Court, this afternoon, Mr. Lindsell resumed the hearing of the charge preferred against a Chinese of causing the death of a lukong by knocking him into the Harbour.

Inspector Watt conducted the case for the prosecution, and Mr. Dixon, of Messrs. Wilkinson and Grist, defended.

Dr. Macfarlane said death, in his opinion, was due to drowning. There was a slight wound on the left thigh. There was blood on the scalp, there was no fracture of the skull, but there was hemorrhage over the back of the brain. The injury could have been caused by a fall which would probably have caused insensibility.

A coolie who was on the wharf when the incident occurred, gave evidence to the effect that he saw the deceased being struck by the defendant, and that he saw defendant knock the deceased down.

A Chinese who said the defendant worked for him on the wharf as a cargo coolie, also said that whilst the man was in his employ his character was a good one. Defendant was committed for trial, the defence being reserved.

ALLEGED THEFT.

What Did the $1,430 Represent.

At the Police Court, this morning, Lo Fa-chun, a jewellery dealer of 154, Des Vaux Road, prosecuted Fang Chak-wan on a charge of stealing $1,430 from him on November 2.

Mr. J. H. Gardiner prosecuted, and Mr. Dixon, of Messrs. Wilkinson and Grist, appeared for the defence.

According to the prosecution, the money was obtained for the purpose of purchasing rings. It was explained by Mr. Gardiner that one of the men who was present when the money was paid over, had had the misfortune to lose his mother and when he was sent for, he telegraphed that he would not be able to attend. When his wife had heard the evidence he would see that the defendant meant to deprive the complainant of $1,430.

Inspector P. O'Sullivan said the defendant and the complainant came to No. 7 Police Station together in the evening of November 3, with a Chinese Constable. They came about the present charge. Complainant made a report and witness detained the defendant that night. Defendant told witness he had borrowed the money from the complainant. Later he said the complainant had been in business with him in the country and that the money had been lost in the business.

The defence was that the defendant had had a loan from the complainant and had paid off same, leaving a balance of $1,430. The hearing was adjourned.

ONLY DELAYED.

Jumped from Window to Avoid Arrest.

A Chinese thief thought to elude the police by jumping from a window, but he found the distance from the upper floor rather more than one of his ankles could stand. His fall made his arrest more easily accomplished and he was taken to the hospital. After several weeks' treatment there, he was brought to the Police Court this morning, and charged with the offence, the outcome being that he will spend his next six weeks in a place not so accommodating as the hospital, by order of Mr. Lindsell.

THE JAPANESE FESTIVITIES.

Interesting Celebrations on Shamoon.

On Wednesday the Japanese Coronation Day was kept very hospitably and wholeheartedly on Shamoon. The Japanese of the Concession were at home, on a very large scale, to all their friends; and a very enjoyable day was spent.

At 4 p.m. a highly successful entertainment was given, consisting of national dances, a conjuring display and a costume procession. This was followed by two fireworks exhibitions, corresponding to those held on the same day in Hongkong; and the day's proceedings closed with a cinematograph show.

Bijou Theatre.
The current programme at the Bijou Theatre is full of interesting and dramatic features. The principal item—"Love and Conspiracy"—is a powerful historical story-film in four parts, dealing with one of the many Italian revolts against the Austrians. The orchestra at this little theatre has become quite a feature and we are glad to notice that a programme of the music played is now supplied to visitors. Tomorrow the new and realistic film "The Fatal Emerald" will be screened for the first time.

COMMERCIAL.

Singapore Para Rubber Estates.
The directors' annual report and statement of accounts for the above Company was issued on October 28th, and shows a profit for the year of £10,478. The directors recommend a final dividend of 7 1/2 per cent. (making 10 per cent. for the year) and that £1,000 be written off as depreciation, and £2,000, placed to reserve account, leaving £5,858 to be carried forward to next year.

Failure of Rice Crops About Tieling.

Whilst no exact returns are yet available, the rice crops about Tieling, which is one of the largest rice centres in South Manchuria, are anything but favourable. The Kitay Farm, Tieling, and the Yamaguchi Farm at Lagahishan, at each of which more than 30,000 mu of land is under cultivation, had progressed as best as might be expected until the close of the blossoming season when the sudden drop of the mercury interfered with the fruiting process.

Outputs of Fushun Collieries.

6,600 tons, per day.
Oyama Shaft has been receiving the application of the sand-flushing process and is putting out only 800 tons a day. Lohotai colliery, which was visited by fire last winter, puts out 700 tons a day. Chienchin Pit yields 2,000 tons a day; Togo Shaft 1,300 tons; Yangraipit Pit 1,200 tons; Wantaw Pit 100 tons; and Kuohengta open cast 500 tons. The present total daily outputs of the Fushun Collieries amount to 6,600 tons a day, which amount, through further progress of the sand flushing method, etc., is expected to be increased by about 20 per cent. by winter.

Piece Goods.

The piece goods market during the week shows comparatively little change, the tendency being to weakness, says the N.O. Daily News of November 6. The auctions are still lifeless and only hand to mouth sales are taking place, lots in some instances being withdrawn. There are inquiries from Yagzu ports and other inland cities, but the native up country is content to make his offers at his own prices with the expectation of the usual long credit. Sooner or later he will realize the fact that the price of commodities at home is going up by leaps and bounds, which is the actual fact to-day, also that dyed goods cannot be replaced at anything like the rates that are now offering. The dealer of the interior has got a lot to learn before he can realize the actual state of affairs in the piece goods world.

Chongchiatun as Agricultural and Stock Centres.

The progress of reclamation work about Chongchiatun is made at the expense of the stock-raising industry. The live stock business is no longer what it used to be. Still the annual number of cattle and horses dealt in at Chongchiatun has not yet fallen below 15,000 head each. Horses for farming use in South Manchuria, together with most of mounts for use by the Twentieth and the Twenty-Seventh Divisions and also by the Kirin troops are also purchased about Chongchiatun. Cattle bought by Russian merchants for export to Harbin, etc., amount to 5,000 to 6,000 head. Chongchiatun, which is now coming to the fore as an agricultural centre, has lost little of its lustre as a stock centre. A large number of horses from great distances in the interior of Mongolia are brought to the fair at Chongchiatun.

Tigers Partially for Dogs.
A tiger, which had been causing a great deal of trouble lately at Kuala Reman, Kuantan, says the M.M., has been successfully trapped. The beast measured seven feet in length. It showed a great partiality for dogs, and carried off most of those in the immediate neighbourhood.
